

Assistance For Heroin & Opioids Addiction

by Grand Falls Recovery Center | Apr 30, 2023 | Uncategorized

Missouri, like other states in the country, hasn't been spared by the opioid epidemic. Unfortunately, the rate of deaths linked to opioid use and abuse has continued to spiral upward across the state with as many as 1200 people losing their lives to opioid-related overdose in 2018.

Opioids belong to a class of drugs that includes illegal or street drugs such as fentanyl and heroin and legally prescribed medications such as morphine and oxycodone, among others. Unfortunately, even when taken on prescription and as directed, opioids still have a high potential for addiction. Whether prescription or illicit, opioids all work to relieve pain and discomfort, giving users a sense of relief and euphoria for a short while.

These effects often wear off quickly, and because the user craves the pain relief or high again, they take another dose. With continued opioid use, the individual may keep taking higher doses to achieve the same effect or high as before. This is dangerous as it increases the chances of overdose and death.
